"Outrageous Love"

I read a quote this week that really made me think. "The example of Jesus many want to follow is his turning over tables and driving moneychangers out of the temple, but the example Jesus and his apostles actually teach us to follow is the cross." We live in a society that encourages outrage, and even Christians tend to partake. When we see something that upsets us in the news, we become up in arms. Many of us are quick to boycott some company because we feel they have attacked our belief system, and we can't let that stand. We think that we're in the right because Jesus showed righteous anger at times. Well, yes, he did, but that only happened in a couple minor accounts. In the major account of Jesus being confronted with sin, he chose immeasurable love through self-sacrifice. This is the example scripture calls us to. God's word doesn't tell us to be outraged, it tells us to love even those who attack us. Which example will you choose, love or outrage? I hope it will be outrageous love.

-In love, Jay
